I. SITUATION OVERVIEW

A. Chronological of Events and Eruption Notifications from 13 to 24 January 2018 (TAB A)

B. Current Situation

25 January 2018

Between 6:02 AM yesterday to 3:00 AM this morning, six (6) episodes of intense but sporadic lava fountaining from the summit crater lasting 9 mins to 58 mins occurred. The lava fountains reached 400-500 meters high and generated ash plumes that reached 3-5 km above the crater. The events fed lava flows on the Miisi and Bonga Gullies, sprayed near-vent lava spatter, and fed incandescent rockfall on the summit area. Pyroclastic density currents or PDCs on gullies heading the Miisi, Lidong/Basud, and Buyuan Channels were also observed. The runout of PDCs on the Buyuan Channel is now exceeding 5 km from the summit crater.

A total of thirteen (13) tremor events, six (6) of which correspond to the lava fountaining events, two (2) episodes of pyroclastic density current or PDC generation from lava collapse, and numerous rockfall events were recorded by Mayon's seismic monitoring network. Rockfall events were generated by the collapsing lava front and margins of the advancing lava flow on the Miisi Gully and by shedding from the summit dome onto the Bonga Gully. Currently, the Miisi and Buyuan lava flows have advanced to 3 km and 1 km, respectively, from the summit crater. Sulfure dioxide gas emission was measured at an average of 1,252 tonnes/day on 24 January 2018. Electronic tilt and continuous GPS measurements indicate a sustained swelling or inflation of the edifice since November and October 2017, consistent with pressurization by magmatic intrusion.

Eruption notifications:
